

Blackening Britain begins with the taller trees, such as Harold Moody, in the urban forests of 1950s British race relations. From these heights, this comprehensive text plunges its readers into the thick and violent undergrowth, where the struggles of Black immigrants to survive remained for decades at the level of life and death. It closes with Black political and intellectual responses to these bitter racial struggles. Most definitely an informative and engaging read.
— Paget Henry, Professor of Africana Studies and Sociology, Brown University

The Caribbean Philosophical Association's

BOOK FRIDAY!

February 26th Noon EST

featuring

Blackening Britain: Caribbean Radicalism from Windrush to Decolonization

by James G. Cantres

Participation is free but you must pre-register:

link to be announced shortly!

Commentary by Gabriella Beckles-Raymond, SOAS, University of London, Kojo Koram, Birkbeck, University of London, and Michele Mitchell, New York University, with remarks by the author

One lucky participant will win a free copy of the featured book!